AREAS OF EXPERTISE AND STYLE OF PRACTICE

Dr. Tyner specializes in the practice of marriage and family therapy, and is experienced in working with problems of childhood, parenthood, marital difficulties, and adult difficulties that may be related directly or indirectly to disturbances in family relationships.

Whether working with an individual, couple, or family, Dr. Tyner works from an ecosystemic perspective, which means that she accepts a client's immediate relationships and larger social context as being important factors in solving life's problems.

Specifically, Dr. Tyner works from a strategic orientation, which means that a well-defined plan for achieving identified goals or solving specified problems is developed in collaboration with the client. The emphasis in therapy is placed on assisting the client in finding workable solutions and accessing the resources necessary to enact those solutions in a time-limited framework. Therapy focuses on providing insight into the "historical roots" of problems only as it is absolutely necessary to the resolution of the problem as it finds expression in the "here-and-now." In many instances, problems are most efficiently solved without dwelling on "historical causes" at all.

TYPES OF CLIENTS SERVED

Dr. Tyner has experience working with elderly adults, adults, teenagers, and children of all ages. When working with teenagers and children, Dr. Tyner strongly prefers to work with the whole family. Unwillingness or inability of family members to participate in therapy may result in referral.

ETHICAL CODE OF CONDUCT/LEGAL REQUIREMENTS

The quality and provision of psychotherapy or family/couples therapy is governed by state law and ethical guidelines. These laws and guidelines are designed to protect the consumer.

As a Licensed Marital and Family Therapist in Louisiana, Dr. Tyner is bound by law to adhere to the Code of Ethics for Licensed Marriage and Family Therapists. Copies of is code is available upon request.

Confidentiality—By law, Dr. Tyner is prohibited from releasing any information regarding your therapy to any third party without a signed release that reflects your informed consent. Electronically submitted or reproduced releases without an original signature (fax, e-mail attachment, photocopy) or verbal permission from the client to release information may be accepted, but only in the case of an emergency.

General Exceptions to Confidentiality—There are certain conditions and circumstances that require confidentiality to be broken by the therapist. Specifically, it must be reported to appropriate authorities when:

1. The therapists has reasonable suspicion of child abuse, elder abuse, or the abuse of a mentally handicapped person.

2. The therapist is convinced that the client is indicating serious, imminent physical harm to himself/herself (suicide) or to some other specific person (homicide). In the latter case, the therapist has a duty to warn the individual who is being threatened and to contact the appropriate authorities.

There are other circumstances that may limit the rule of confidentiality. Certain types of litigation, such as child custody, may result in a court ordered release of information without your consent.

Exceptions to Confidentiality When Using Insurance—If a client uses an HMO, PPO, EAP, or other insurance plans to pay for services, he or she may have already signed a waiver of confidentiality with the providing company so that the therapist can submit claims or reports for the purpose of reimbursement. If the client did not sign such a waiver, the right of the insurance provider to have access to information that would otherwise be privileged may be implied in the consumer/provider agreement. In any event, signing this document will authorize the therapist to submit necessary information about your case to your health care insurer for the purpose of reimbursement. If you have questions about the policies and procedures of your health care insurer in regard to confidentiality, please check with them directly.

Please note that health care insurers may require or allow the transmission of information electronically (fax, e-mail attachment, through a web site, or verbally by phone) through systems that may not be secure. Further, the therapist cannot be responsible for the treatment of confidential information by the health care insurer after it has been transmitted or submitted. Note that some health care insurers may sell or otherwise provide information to other insurers or third parties without the permission of the client or therapist.

Clinical Situations that Affect Confidentiality—Special clinical situations may exist that require informed consent of the client in order for information to be released. For example, in couple, family, or group therapy, information cannot be released to a party outside the treatment context about any certain individual without the written consent of all parties being treated. Information shared by individuals in a private session where other family members are not present must be held in confidence (except for the mandated exceptions already noted) unless that individual signs a release of information. Note, however, that maintaining confidentiality for individual sessions during couples or family therapy could impede or even prevent a positive outcome to therapy and could result in referral.

While the therapist himself is bound by confidentiality in a marital, family, or group setting as described above, the therapist cannot be responsible for information shared by family or group members with others outside the treatment context.

Electronic Transmission of Data—The therapist cannot control and is not responsible for the unauthorized interception of data by a third party when it is being transmitted electronically by cell phone, wireless phone, e-mail, fax, or other electronic device. The client does this at his or her own risk.

Note to Military Clients—Utilizing your Tri-care coverage may result in the forfeiture of your right to confidentiality if you maintain a security clearance. Further, utilizing your coverage could threaten your security or task status. To discuss how this may be avoided while receiving counseling services, check with Dr. Tyner before signing this document.

THE CLIENT—THERAPIST RELATIONSHIP

Therapist Responsibility—It is the responsibility of the therapist to provide quality services that fall in delivery and scope within the legal and ethical guidelines referred to above, to provide clear and complete information about his clinical practices and procedures so that the client can provide informed consent to treatment, and, as is within his reasonable ability, to provide a safe, trusting context for the therapy process.

Client Responsibility—The client is responsible for acquainting himself/herself with basic information regarding office practices and procedures as explained in this document. In addition, client responsibilities include:

1. Prearranging any authorization with his/her insurance provider or HMO (if the client plans to file a claim) and presenting any authorization or claim numbers to the secretary before the first session.
2. Presenting to the secretary before the first session any material necessary to filing HMO or insurance claims, such as Insurance Coverage Card or Military ID Card.
3. Filling out the intake form provided completely and accurately, including current medications.
4. Keeping agreed-upon appointment times consistently and promptly.¹
5. Informing the therapist of any change in status, such as address or telephone number.
6. Informing the therapist of a clinical relationship with any other mental health professional while therapy with Dr. Tyner is on-going so that provisions can be made to avoid any ethical or therapeutic conflict.

¹* Note that appointments that not cancelled within twenty-four hours may be subject to fee.

Ethics dictate that clients make their own decisions about such things as deciding to marry, separate, divorce, reconcile, or setting up child custody. The therapist will help the client think through possible options and potential consequences, but ethics disallow the therapist from offering advice to the client in making specific decisions.

It is strongly suggested that clients undergo a routine physical as a prelude to therapy if there has been no physical in the past year. Many emotional or psychological difficulties can be the result of some physical problem.

WHAT TO EXPECT

Therapy sessions are typically fifty (50) minutes to one hour in length. The first session is usually spent in gathering information about the history and on-going character of the problem(s) that the client wishes to work on in therapy.

Sessions thereafter are usually scheduled one time a week, and are devoted to establishing mutually agreed upon goals for therapy and developing strategies to meet those goals. The length of the therapy process depends on the nature and severity of the presenting problem. However, most problems are successfully resolved in eight (8) to ten (10) sessions.

At the end of sessions, “homework” may be assigned to the client. This homework is important to the therapy process; therefore, clients are strongly encouraged to complete these assignments to maximize the effectiveness and the efficiency of their counseling experience.

ROUTINE BUSINESS PROCEDURES/PRACTICES

Office Hours—Dr. Tyner schedules client sessions on Fridays and Saturdays. Occasionally, week day times will be available.

A secretary is on duty from 9:15 am until 5:00 pm Monday through Thursday, and 9:15 am until 2:00 pm on Friday. If the secretary is not on duty or away from her desk, or if all lines are busy, an answering machine will automatically take calls.

The office may be closed for certain holidays or special events.

Making/Breaking Appointments—Sessions are by appointment only. Session availability is limited. Typically, appointments are made with Dr. Tyner after each session. However, appointments can be made, changed, or cancelled by phone or in person with the secretary during her office hours as stated above or with Dr. Tyner directly. Note that an appointment cancelled or changed with less than 24 hours notice may result in a full charge for that session. Also note that excessive “no-shows”, cancellations, or reschedules on the part of the client could result in referral.

Standard Fees—Dr. Tyner’s fee for a fifty (50) minute therapy session is $100.00. Sessions of greater length are subject to additional charge. Full payment for services rendered is expected after each session. Inability to pay full fee or nonpayment of fees may result in referral.

Health Care Coverage—If the client has a traditional health insurance policy that covers services provided by an LMFT, then information will be provided to the client to file a claim for reimbursement. This information, called a “superbill”, is provided to all clients and also acts as a receipt of payment and reminder of the date and time of the next appointment.

Note that Dr. Tyner does not accept all health coverage plans, even though they may cover her services.

When filing for reimbursement, the client is still responsible for payment at the time services are rendered. The client is responsible for any fees not covered by a traditional insurance policy.

If the client has coverage provided by an HMO, PPO, or EAP, then the therapist may be responsible for filing a claim. In many cases, however, the client must pay a co-pay. This co-pay is due at the close of each session.

Fees for Court Appearances, Depositions, Documentation—If compelled to appear in court, time used to prepare for, travel to, and appear in court will be charged at the rate of $200 an hour. Additional fees will be charged for duplication and/or submission of documentation, such as case notes or existing reports, at the rate of $10.00 per page.

Dr. Tyner charges an initial $1000 retainer for court appearances payable at the time a subpoena is received. When the retainer has been used up, the client will be billed another $1000 to retain Dr. Tyner’s services, if necessary. Portions of the retainer are refundable at Dr. Tyner’s discretion. Dr. Tyner bills $700 dollars for a deposition, payable at the time the subpoena is received.

A simple report to be submitted to the Court that is not part of a deposition or court appearance is billed at a flat fee of $300 per submission, payable at the time of request or subpoena.

Routine Reports and Documentation—Routine reports for purposes other than court can be provided at the client’s request upon receipt of a signed waiver. A flat fee of $150 dollars is charged for routine reports. Routine documentation may also be provided upon the client’s request and upon receipt of a signed waiver. If such documentation is ten (10) pages or less, there is no fee. For eleven (11) or more pages, the fee is $10 a page.

As the result of special arrangement, a fee may be charged for telephone contact at the rate of $1.50 a minute.

Routine Telephone Contact—Dr. Tyner prioritizes her face-to-face consultation with her clients and does not take phone calls while she is in session. Her time to return phone calls is limited. Dr. Tyner will return calls in the order in which they are received and as time allows.

There is typically no charge for routine telephone contact. However, Dr. Tyner reserves the right to bill for telephone calls of over ten minutes or that become more frequent than one time a week at the rate of $1.50 a minute.

POTENTIAL RISKS

As a client works to make changes through participation in marital or family therapy, relationships with other individuals in the client's social system who may not benefit from those changes may resist change. Further, changes in relationship patterns that may result from family therapy may produce unpredicted and/or adverse responses from other people in the client's social system.

Research suggests that working on marital issues in therapy with only one spouse can have a detrimental effect on the quality of the marriage and can lead to dissolution of the marriage.

As the result of mental health counseling, a client may realize that he/she has additional issues which may not have surfaced prior to the formation of the counseling relationship.

IN CASE OF EMERGENCY

When an emergency arises and an immediate emergency response is required, clients are instructed to call the Willis-Knighton Behavioral Medicine Unit located at 2510 Bert-Kouns Industrial Loop in Shreveport, telephone number 318-212-5200. Emergency services are available twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.
